When I moved to Portland 6 years ago from Riverside County in southern California, the only rivers I knew were dry sand. I am fortunate to live in an apartment that overlooks the Willamette River and marvel daily at the endless flow of water. I do not take it for granted. Nor do I eat any fish caught from it. I would not recommend anyone eat fish from the Willamette.

I am a member of and support the Willamette Riverkeeper's position on cleaning or removing toxic sediment from 1,000 acres of river bottom.

Expensive? Certainly. But since we saved so much money by using the river as a chemical sewer we should be able to afford the cleanup.
